Final report of the research study to assess to what extent data from the Single Application Form could be used to meet the statistical requirements of the June Agricultural Census. Excerpt from Agricultural Situation, Vol. 60: The Crop Reporters Magazine; June 1976 Between 1960 and 1975, world soy bean output more than doubled to nearly 63 million metric tons. By 1985, the figure should reach 85 million metric tons, assuming basic trends continue and that to some extent, economic policies in some nations will restrict international trade. As recently as 1973, the u.s. Contributed 73 percent of the world's soybean crop. That share, which has already shrunk to two-thirds, will further weaken to less than 60 per cent by 1985, due to intense competition from Brazil. That nation, which has only recently emerged as a major supplier, will probably produce a fourth of the world's soy beans in 1985. Farm structures in Central and Eastern Europe (CEE) today cover a whole spectrum of forms, which include small subsistence-oriented household plots, medium-sized commercial family farms, and large corporations. The agricultural sector in CEE definitely has not embraced the family farm as the dominant farming structure, thus confounding the original expectations of Western experts. On the other hand, agriculture did not collapse because of fragmentation and privatization, as predicted by conservative doomsayers. To address the concerns of the farming sector in CEE with relation to EU accession, a workshop was held in Warsaw, Poland in June 1999. This volume represents a selection of papers presented at this workshop. It examines the reforms and policy changes necessary in the food and agriculture sectors of the ten countries that have started the accession process for eventual membership in the European Union (Bulgaria, Czech Republic, Estonia, Hungary, Latvia, Lithuania, Poland, Romania, Slovakia, and Slovenia). The papers are organized around the following three topics: • Evolving farm structures and competitiveness in agriculture; • Land laws and legal institutions for development of land markets and farm restructuring; and • Development of farm services for improved competitiveness. This volume will be of interest to agricultural policy makers and government officials in the candidate countries, EU officials, World Bank and FAO staff, development scholars, and all others interested in the process of agricultural reform in CEE.
